MARINE CORPS ORDER FOR COUNSELING

➤ Marine Corps Order 1610.12

Counseling involves two-way communication between you and your Marines to help achieve or maintain the highest possible level of performance.

Counseling is done on a regular basis by the senior officer, staff noncommissioned officer, or noncommissioned officer to whom the Marine reports.

Your role as the senior is to help the junior Marine to achieve or maintain desired levels of performance and to plan ahead.

The junior Marine is responsible for meeting the objectives that are developed during the counseling process. You must continuously follow-up to ensure this.

To be truly effective, the counseling process involves supporting and reinforcing good performance as well as correcting deficiencies. It is a positive, forward-looking process that focuses on improving a Marine's performance.

There are times when your counseling will be a one way conversation. These should be very direct in nature and are not mentioned in the Marine Corps order.

MARINE CORPS POLICY ON COUNSELING

•Counseling is a tool of leadership.
